

Cuby4 development license agreement

I request a copy of the development version of Cuby software package (version 4) and therefore agree to the following terms and conditions:

1. The ownership and rights to the package or to any copies of it remain with the author, Jan Řezáč, Institute of Organic Chemistry and Biochemistry AS CR, v.v.i.
2. The program and any documentation is supplied on an as is basis without any warranty, and thus with no additional responsibility or liability.
3. The package or any parts of it must not be distributed outside of my research group.
4. I agree that modifications of the code developed by me or my coworkers and the rights to them will be made available to author of Cuby package and could be incorporated into the package and redistributed under any license. These rights to the code modifications are transferred non-exclusively, so my rights to those modifications are not affected.
5. Minor modifications of the code, such as improvements of existing functionality or bugfixes will be contributed to the development version maintained by the author of the package as soon as possible.
6. New functionality developed by me will be added to the development version maintained by the author of the package (and thus it will become available to other users and developers) no later than when the results results obtained with the new code are published.
7. Authorship of my contributions to the code will be denoted in the source code and acknowledged in the documentation, and users will be asked to cite my work if applicable.
8. I will inform the author of Cuby about my publications featuring results obtained with Cuby. These publications must contain appropriate reference to Cuby.

Name

Institution

Signature